Roosevelt Kills Bill on Ohio Pension Refund

Calls Action Warning To All Other States

President Says Disapproval Decided Upon to Show States Compliance Necessary to Get Federal Funds.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—President Roosevelt vetoed today a bill to reimburse Ohio for $1,388,160 social security payments withheld from the state for the month of October, 1938, because of defects found in the administration of the state old age assistance plan.

In a veto message to the house, Mr. Roosevelt said it seemed to him disapproval of the measure "will serve notice on every state in the union that all kinds of federal aid must be conditioned on full compliance with the federal law and wholly without discrimination or inefficiency."

The federal funds were withheld from the state and later lengthy investigations and hearings were held by the social security board which resulted in findings that there was inefficient administration of the old age assistance plan, "wholesale violation of the state civil service laws" and other defects including a "faulty accounting system."

Mr. Roosevelt said he was vetoing the bill to reimburse the state, which met the payments for October, 1938, out of its own funds, because he believed "an expeditious, effective and non-political administration of the provisions of the social security act is indispensable to the conduct of operations thereunder."

Approval of the legislation, the president said, would be inconsistent with this objective and establish a precedent that would "seriously endanger the success of the entire social security program."

If the bill were signed, he continued, its precedent could be extended to other forms of federal aid, such as that for highway construction, for widows and for dependent or crippled children.

"It would mean," he asserted, "that states no longer would be compelled to maintain the standards set up by the congress, but could violate these standards with impunity and still get their money."

Martin L. Davey, then governor of Ohio, denied charges that he had used the old age money for political purposes.

Could Violate Laws.

Should the bill become law, Mr. Roosevelt said, it would make it possible for a state agency to violate civil service laws, give blanket increases to some and deny aid to other needy applicants, dis-

BRITISH ADMIT 5TH DESTROYER SUNK BY NAZIS

200 Men Perish as Torpedo or Mine Strikes Craft in North Sea.

23RD NAVAL SHIP SUNK

Commander of Exmouth Given Honors Only Recently for Action Against Subs.

(By Associated Press)

LONDON—Sinking of the British Destroyer Exmouth by a torpedo or mine in the North sea with the loss of all hands—nearly 200 men—was reported by the admiralty today on the 25th anniversary of the World war battle of Dogger Bank

It was the fifth destroyer and 23rd British naval vessel acknowledged as sunk since the present war with Germany began Sept 3.

The Exmouth normally carried 175 men, but wartime crews usually are increased about 10 per cent. A 1,475-ton vessel, built in 1934, the Exmouth was a flotilla leader, carrying five 4.7-inch guns, seven smaller guns, and eight 21-inch torpedo tubes.

The sinking was the first in which not a man was reported saved.

She was the same class as the Grenville, destroyer which sank Saturday with a loss of 81 lives.

Other destroyer losses were the Blanche and Gipsy, which struck mines Nov. 23, and the Duchess, which sank in a collision with another warship Dec 13

The Exmouth's commander, Capt. R S Benson, received the distinguished service order only last month for "successful action against enemy submarines"

Losses Hit 82,000 Tons.

The sinking pushed Britain's acknowledged naval losses past 82,000 tons. Biggest individual sinkings to date have been the 22,500-ton Aircraft Carrier Courageous, torpedoed Sept. 18 in the English Channel; the 29,150-ton Battleship Royal Oak, torpedoed Nov. 14 at Scapa Flow; and the 16,697-ton armed merchant cruiser Rawalpindi, sunk by a German pocket battleship Nov. 25, near Iceland.

Germany has acknowledged the loss only of the 10,000-ton Pocket Battleship Admiral Graf Spee Dec. 17, two 400-ton patrol boats and a few submarines.

It was a different story 25 years ago when the smoke cleared from North sea shoal off the English coast.

The British wrote that encounter down as a victory. The German Battle Cruiser Bluecher was sunk and three regular German Chamberlain Says Government Studies Aid to Belgium.

LONDON —(AP)— Prime Minister Chamberlain enumerated in the house of commons today treaties and declarations from 1925 to August, 1939, in which Britain undertook "to go to the immediate assistance of Belgium in event of unprovoked aggression by Germany."

Chamberlain added that the question of how the guarantees could be implemented if the need arose was receiving the full attention of the government, which he said must retain the right to decide what constituted aggression or threatened attack.

Many phases of Britain's foreign relations were touched upon in today's session of parliament.

Chamberlain, asked if Britain would break off relations with Russia, replied that such a move "would require most careful consideration in all its aspects."

NEW COLD WAVE RUNS INTO SNAG

But Forecast Still Calls for Drop in Temperature; South Digs Out of Record Snow.

If everything had run according to schedule, Mansfield would have been experiencing the third section of the prolonged cold wave that swept into the mid-west more than a week ago.

As it was, the new arctic blast ran into a snag and no one seemed to care. But the weatherman hasn't given up. He promises considerably lower temperatures tonight with snow flurries and predicted generally fair and continued cold tomorrow.

Winter relaxed its grip slightly today as the mercury rose to 24 degrees above at noon, the same mark recorded yesterday. The low last night was 17 above, the warmest in the past week

As the sub-zero weather spread over the northern part of the nation today, the deep south, still in the grip of extremely low temperatures, began digging itself out after one of the heaviest and most general snowstorms in history.

Unprepared for the phenomenon, many of the larger cities of the south were temporarily disorganized, with traffic and business coming to a virtual standstill. A low of 7 degrees above in Houston, Texas, yesterday played havoc with water pipes, and homes and apartments were difficult to keep warm.

A fall of more than 10 inches of snow at Birmingham, Ala., was one of the heaviest in the area, but Knoxville, Tenn., reported about 12 inches of snow and Atlanta had about 10 inches.

In the north, particularly in the plains states, another cold wave was setting in following a blast last week when sent temperatures down to a minimum of 32 degrees below zero.

Ex-Garage Employe Accused of Passing 3 Bogus Checks at Cafes for $700.

HELD FOR GRAND JURY

Tells Police He Made Several Trips to California Since He Was Sought in City.

The Mansfield man who allegedly "made" more than $700 within a few minutes last September and who literally has been flying high since then, was "grounded" today in municipal court where he was bound over to the grand jury under $3,000 on a charge of forgery.

William Lawler, 34, who formerly worked at a Mansfield garage for several years, pleaded innocent before Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch this morning, waived hearing and was bound over to the county grand jury.

He was arrested last night after an acquaintance had tipped off police that he was in the city.

Sought Since Sept. 9.

Lawler, who used an alias of Carl Albert Linders, had been sought since last Sept. 9 after he had allegedly cashed three checks at Mansfield cafes, each check for more than $200 Victims were Edward Burghard, proprietor of The Hofbrau, Schmutzler's cafe and Henry Casad, proprietor of the Long Bar

An employe of the Long Bar came to city jail this morning and identified Lawler as the man who had passed a bogus check at the cafe last September The three checks were passed within an hour.

Police said that all the men who cashed the checks, knew Lawler by sight, that they had frequently cashed large checks for him which were good.

Lawler told police today that he had taken several trips to California, had made several airplane trips and had been in Chicago, St. Louis and Dayton. He had acquired two cars, one of which was abandoned in Akron, and the other, an expensive make, was in his possession.

Quizzed In California.

Lawler told friends that he had several "bad moments" in California when police stopped him and said he looked like a man who was being hunted for forgery in a small town. He was taken before the California victims, who failed to identify him and he was released.

When brought into court this morning, Lawler first pleaded not guilty and then changed his plea to guilty, and later the plea was changed again to not guilty.

The Nippon Yusen Kaisha line headquarters here made public a radio message from Capt. Ito which carefully avoided identification.

Security Board to Probe Ohio Unemployment Compensation.

CLEVELAND—(AP)—The social security board will conduct a "factual survey" of administrative procedures of Ohio's bureau of Unemployment compensation as a result of CIO charges of mismanagement, Robert C. Goodwin, the board's regional director, announced today.

The board's decision, Goodwin said, was based on a preliminary survey conducted by Fred C. Croxton of the Washington bureau.

The board "will send several technicians to Columbus, late this week," Goodwin added.

John Owens, president of the Ohio congress of industrial organizations, filed charges with the board in Washington alleging H. C. Atkinson, director of the Ohio bureau, last year deprived jobless persons of $14,250,000 through maladministration

COLUMBUS — John L. Lewis declared today that should the Democratic national convention "be coerced or dragooned" into renominating President Roosevelt "his candidacy would result in ignominious defeat."

Lewis' statement was made unexpectedly before the United Mine Workers of America convention. He asserted it would be "unwise at this time" to make any presidential endorsements but suggested that the executive board be empowered to take up the matter at the proper time.

The UMW president accused the Democratic party of "failing to keep faith with labor." He expressed belief hat President Roosevelt probably would not be a candidate for renomination

Lewis asserted that in 1936 organized labor furnished money, speakers, party workers and millions of votes to help return the Democratic party to power.

WASHINGTON—The Dies committee, with its life extended until Jan. 3, 1941, will be confronted with demands for investigations in many fields, members indicated today.

A new program will be mapped out soon after Chairman Martin Dies, (D) Texas, recuperating now at his home, returns to Washington He is expected within a week The house voted continuation of the committee yesterday, 345 to 21.

Investigation of Communist and Nazi activities on the Pacific coast was expected to be the first big field of operations for the committee. Its investigators have charged that Communists have made inroads in the Hollywood movie colony and among state and federal employes on the Pacific coast.

Two members of the committee, Reps Dempsey (D.) New Mexico and Casey (D.) Massachusetts, proposed that the committee announce a series of open hearings and invite all persons who have been accused by committee witnesses of Fascist, Communist or Nazi activities, to appear.

Drastic revision of committee procedure, interpreted by some members as a slap at Chairman Dies, also will be proposed in the first executive session of the committee. Rep Voorhis (D.) California, plans to ask the committee to adopt rules of procedure which include a ban upon statements and predictions by members without approval of the full committee or positive evidence to support their assertions.

Ex-Army Officer Jailed for Spreading Phony S. O. S.

RESCUE BOATS FAIL TO FIND WRECKED SHIP

Spreader of Reports Lodged in Jail; Declares He Was 'Cold Sober.'

(By United Press)

EDGARTOWN, Mass. — Capt. Byron C. Brown, retired army officer arrested on a drunkenness charge, insisted today that he was "cold sober" last night when he claims he heard a distress call from a ship sinking with 147 persons aboard.

In an interview in the warden's office, after being brought from his cell at Edgartown jail, Brown said:

"I had had nothing to drink—in fact there wasn't a drop in the house."

A widespread search by coast guard and naval craft of the ice-choked waters of Vineyard sound whence the call supposedly came had been called off early today after state police seized Brown.

"I was listening in on the short-wave on my home radio—as I do practically every night — when suddenly I picked up the distress call," Brown said. "That was at 7:02 last night.

"My wife was in the house but she was out of the room so she didn't hear the call, which was an indistinct voice. I called to her and told her about it. She said, 'You'd better report it.' Then I called the coast guard."

Made All-Night Search.

Five coast guard boats and the destroyer Breckenridge were still searching the location on icy vineyard sound from which Brown said the distress call had come, at the time of his arrest. They had sped out late last night and the first of them to reach the scene, the coast guard cutter General Greene, reported that the sea was calm, visibility unlimited and that no ship or wreckage was in sight.

Brown first called the coast guard station at Gay Head last night and reported that while sitting at home by his short wave radio he had heard a distress call in code saying "S O S —send help—we are sinking."

He said he had not been able to catch the ship's name or the name of its officer and radio operator, which had been broadcast.

NLRB Head Slams 'Agitators', Hits Menace to Public

CLEVELAND — (AP) — Singling out the National Association of Manufacturers and the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, J. Warren Madden, chairman of the National Labor Relations Board, last night termed "constant agitation" by Wagner act foes a "menace to public order."

"The National Labor Relation Act has fulfilled its avowed purpose and has in addition produced by-products which are of great social advantage," Madden said in a message to a conference of the United Christian Council for Democracy. "Yet there is constant agitation for its repeal or emasculation.

"Most of this agitation originates with organizations such as the National Association of Manufacturers and the U. S. Chamber of Commerce which seem to think that they cannot keep their members paying dues unless, like other agitators they condemn, they paint for them pictures of bogey man who will arise to destroy them if they stop supporting the agitators.

"I do not say that these organizations do not have useful work to do or do not do useful work along some lines. I do say that their constant agitation of a class struggle, by their attempts to deprive American workmen of rights which millions now enjoy, is a menace to public order."

A book of rules and regulations, published in 1913, was revised and re-written this week by Service-Safety Director C. M. Crafton and Fire Chief Charles Seeburger. But the fact remains that the only book of rules issued in 1913 is the last one that has been published and it still contains reference to care of the fire horses. COMPROMISE ON FINN AID DRAWN

Committee Gets Proposal to Loan 30 to 100 Millions to Invaded Nation.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — Sponsors of proposed Finnish-aid legislation submitted a compromise loan plan to the senate banking committee today.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull's opinion on whether aid to Finland would affect this country's neutrality was scheduled to be presented today.

The compromise, worked out by Sen. Prentiss M. Brown, D., Mich., author of the $600,000,000 RFC loan plan, was said to have been received favorably by committee members.

Under a reported understanding between senate leaders and the RF, the export-import bank would grant Finland approximately $20,000,000 for purchases of non-military supplies. The bank already has set aside 10,000,000 for the Finns, only $500,000 of which actually has been disbursed. The proposed increased credit would be disbursed piecemeal, as needed.

The compromise, which was discussed at a luncheon conference yesterday between the president and committee chairman Robert F. Wagner, D., N. Y., was understood to call for a substantial increase in the bank's capital structure. Figures ranging from $30,000,000 to $100,000,000 were mentioned.

HOLDS 'CREDIT INDIGESTION' BIG PROBLEM FACING BUSINESS

Some 150 members of the Mansfield Retail Credit Rating bureau turned out for the bureau's annual dinner at the Mansfeild-Leland hotel last night and heard a talk by Prof. Theodore Beckman of Ohio State university on "Retail Credit Problems and Their Control."

Professor Beckman, author of several books on business credit, said that one of the major problems facing businessmen today was "Credit Indigestion," or over-buying by an individual in proportion to his income.

Stores that are too ready to extend unlimited credit to a customer without regard to his ability to pay soon find the credit business a costly one, Prof. Beckman said. He declared that the cost to a store of doing credit business was but a small part of its total business but warned that too many stores spent insufficient money in investigating credit of their customers.

He also warned against abuses of the credit system, such as allowing too long a period of time for installment payments, misleading statements as to the interest cost on installment purchases and the lack of a definite store policy in the granting of credit.

L. A. Ott, president of the Retail Credit Rating bureau, presided at the meeting. He introduced R. M. Calene, president of the Retail Merchants association.

V. H. Lodde, manager of the bureau gave a report on the activities of the bureau, which now has the names and credit rating of 100,000 persons on file, and described how the bureau works in co-operation with other credit bureaus throughout the country.

EARNINGS UP

Westinghouse Hikes Adjusted Compensation for January.

Westinghouse employes will be paid an adjusted compensation of 12 per cent this month, an increase of two per cent over December, the company announced today.

The amount of compensation is established each month in proportion to the average earnings of the company in the preceding three months. It is figured on base rates of employes and is paid under the firm's wage and salary plan. The December adjusted compensation was 10 per cent.

A. W. Robertson, chairman of the board, pointed out that the plan has been in effect more than three years, and "though adjustments are made in accordance with the average earnings, wages paid are part of the cost of production, and are not taken from accrued earnings."

Net earnings for the last three months were $4,784,552.

ARMY OFFICERS BELIEVE STORM CAUSED MISHAP

Ice Forming on Wings Seen as Cause for Plunge; Two Leap in 'Chutes.

BULLETIN

EDGARTON, Mass. — (U P) — Capt. Byron C. Brown, retired army officer, was adjudged guilty of drunkenness in district court today although he said that he was "cold sober" last night when he claims he heard a distress call from a ship sinking with 147 persons aboard.

(By International News Service)

RIVERSIDE, Cal. — Army authorities today examined the wreckage of a two-motored B-18 bomber to learn why it crashed two miles northeast of Riverside last night, carrying four army airmen to death.

It was believed that ice forming on the wings of the plane as it battled its way through a severe storm caused the crash.

Two men parachuted to safety from the plane. They are Sergeant Cecil Purvis, Glenville, Ga., and Private Frank Carroll, Hyde Park, Mass.

The dead are Lieut. Raymond W. Sumi, 29, Nashwauk, Minn., Lieut Benjamin G. Holloway, 29, Columbus, O., Sergeant Gerald Wilcox, Bennett, Iowa, and Private Leonard Riley, Wichita Falls, Tex.

The bomber was returning from the joint Army and Navy war games held near Monterey, Cal., to its base at March Field, and was under command of Lieut. Sumi

Air corps authorities said the ship was flying on a radio beam and that its radio operator had reported ice forming on the wings.

Private Carroll, one of the men who bailed out, said the ship was falling "as if in a spin" just before he and Sergeant Purvis were ordered to jump.

The bomber struck nose first, apparently with terrific force. Two bodies were found in the cabin, while the other two had been thrown 100 feet from the wreckage.

Only one plane of 38 engaged in a mass infantry flight experiment from Hamilton field in northern California to March field, reached its objective as a result of storms that lashed the Tehachapi pass with rain and snow.

Pegler Thinks Press and Dies Group Have Been Too Easy On Father Coughlin

—By WESTBROOK PEGLER

NEW YORK—Both the government and the newspapers for years have handled Father Coughlin far too gently, but now that he has identified himself with the so-called Christian Front he has called for a showdown.

On the other side, Robert Jackson, the new attorney general, appears to have accepted the challenge in saying that the federal investigation would cover the activities of any individual or group who shall have aided, financed or incited the 17 men arrested in New York on charges of conspiring to wage an armed revolution.

So we seem to be in for a hilarious brawl in the course of which anyone who questions the activities of this priest will do well to wear his oldest clothes and be reconciled to the necessity of burning them afterward.

Coughlin fights like Huey Long and Adolf Hitler, and Huey summed up his rules of controversy in a sentence, "never bother a porcupine unless you expect to get some feathers on you"—a polite paraphrase of a quainter and much more pungent remark which was made famous in Washington by ex-Senator Jim Watson of Indiana.

In contemplating the activities of this man it should be remembered that any American citizen has a right to be anti-Semitic and that there can be no law requiring any person to embrace the Christian religion or any other. Coughlin may be responsible to the Catholic church for his utterances and extrapastoral activities, but the law can't punish him for bad taste, bad faith, recklessness or lack of charity.

On the other hand, if the inquiry should reveal evidence of activity which seemed to violate the law neither the church nor individual members of the faith would have any right to regard prosecution as hostility to the church. Some of the best Catholic clergymen denounce Coughlin and, in discussing him, refer to him by his last name, pointedly neglecting to use the title of "Father."

I have thought that the newspapers were negligent or leary—more likely the latter—because it has seemed to be fear of a boycott that has deterred the decent journalism of the country from doing a duty imposed on it by the privilege enjoyed by a free press.

It is too bad and a reproach to our journalism that it was left to a little Communist sheet to conduct an investigation in Detroit and Wall Street to come up with an expose which may have been truthful but which, from its evil surroundings, absorbed the characteristic odor and color of slander

Christianity, in the religious sense of the word, is no part of the belief of the so-called Christian Front, and Semitism, or Jewishness, is not associated with Bolshevism or Communism. In the meaning of the so-called Christian Front all white persons who are not Jewish are Christians and all Jews are Bolsheviks or Communists. They are not interested in the Negroes.

But within this month Adolf Hitler, having made a military and world-revolutionary alliance with Bolshevism, abruptly discovered that the Jews were not Communists now but capitalists, and declared his mission to exterminate Jewish capitalism within the present century.

Hitler would not be called a Christian, however, and there are other anti-Semitics, including men under Christian vows and attired in the cloth, no more worthy to be so called.

The Dies committee should have treated Coughlin just as it treated Earl Browder, but tiptoed around him for fear that he would cry up a holy war. But his record would show that the party or lobby which he formed in the 1936 campaign, in the same period when he was speaking with ominous insinuation of a resort to bullets instead of ballots and when he was escorted by an armed guard in uniform, was a dictatorial organization of which he was the leader with unquestionable authority.

His program was to elect a stooge president who was to be responsible to the people who put him in the White House, and the will of the people was to be interpreted and expressed to that president only by the people's leader, to wit, himself.

The constitution of his organization plainly shows his dictatorial ambition, and even if he had used the hearings of the Dies committee as a soap box he would have shown up himself and his plan. The constitution was published in full in the Cleveland papers in the summer of 1936.

If Coughlin had worn the cloth of any other religious faith than the Catholic he would have had an open fight on his hands from most of the American press years ago, and the delicacy with which his activities have been ignored all this time, although it may be a tribute of confidence in the Christianity and citizenship of the rest of the Catholic clergy, is open to a suspicion of less honorable motives.

My version is that the press passed him up for fear that Catholics would regard an attack on Coughlin as an attack on the church.

Hollywood Speaks---

—By ROBBIN COONS

By ERNEST BOOTH

(This screen writer—pinch-hitting for vacationing Robbin Coons—takes up such seemingly unrelated topics as DeMille's bathtubs and American history.)

HOLLYWOOD—Once upon a park bench near the palace of the Emperor in Constantinople, a boy named Justinan met a girl called Theodora. He was the Emperor's nephew; she was a voluptuous daughter of pleasure. For a while he lost her, then he won her. They were married and gave the East Roman Empire a fascinating New Deal.

They built bridges, aqueducts, roads, and shoved the currency off the gold standard. They rewrote the laws, plowed under the excess crops and soon had a riot on their bejeweled hands.

Fourteen hundred years later, I heard about them and did a book, "Theodora, The All Gifted." Ten years ago a producer of movies read it and chirped, "Too many hot spots—anyway, historical romance is no good for the screen. Only school teachers come to see it."

"But," I argued, "De Mille—"

"He does it with bath tubs Mack Sennett did it better."

Four years ago a rotund, jovial Hollander named Hollingshead went to Bryan Foy at Warner Brothers with an original idea for historical pictures to be made in technicolor.

"Sounds okay," said Foy. "Take your best shot on it, but, remember, that technicolor film costs bales of folding money."

In July, 1936, Hollingshead produced "The Song of a Nation," dramatically presenting the colorful story of Francis Scott Key's writing of "The Star Spangled Banner." The critics raved. The public flocked to see it. "Holly" had captured the historic event in two reels of beautifully colored film.

That began Warner's program of dramatizing the ideals of Americanism on the screen. Other featurettes followed: "Give Me Liberty," "The Man Without a Country," "The Declaration of Independence," "Sons of Liberty," "The Monroe Doctrine," and others. For three years the Technicolor Featurettes have won Academy Awards.

There is no boy-meets-girl formula in the Featurettes. The vivid, exciting and authentic characters of Patrick Henry, Alexander Hamilton, Robert E. Lee, Clara Barton—founder of the Red Cross—and a host of others live again the magnificent dramas written by life itself. History has become vital, real, exciting and very interesting.

MRS. CREVELING HAS REVIEW AT SOROSIS

Presents Program at Women's Club; Arrangements Made for Next Regular Meeting With Miss Bertha Patterson, Feb. 6.

WHEN Miss Anna Proctor entertained yesterday afternoon at the Women's Club, Mrs. H. L. Creveling gave a book review before members of the Mansfield Sorosis. Her book was "Captain Abby and Captain John" by Robert P. Tristram Coffin. It tells the story of Abby and John Pennell, members of a shipbuilding family in the period from 1834 to 1874.

The book was written as a memorial in connection with the celebration of the bi-centenary anniversary of the incorporation of Brunswick, Me., as a town. The book is based on documents taken from an old sea chest of Captain John Pennell's.

Members of the club answered roll call with anecdotes and jokes. Arrangements were made to hold the next meeting at the club with Miss Bertha Patterson as hostess Feb. 6 at 7:30 p. m. The program will include a paper on New Zealand by Miss Grace Courtney and a talk on Mohican State park by Mrs. O. G. Place.

The next social of the club will be a 1 o'clock luncheon on Washington's birthday with the Misses Bertha and Sophie Ruess serving as hostesses.

Annual Dress Ball Of 134th Planned Saturday Night

The speaker pointed out to her audience that sex education seeks to develop wholesome boy and girl relations. "The earliest training," she told her listeners, "comes in the home, and later the home and the school should work together."

Sex education has gone through three stages, she pointed out. First we taught children what we wanted them to know, second we taught them what we thought they ought to know, and now we are teaching them what we feel they want to know.

Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting with Mrs. Walter Stevens in charge. She was assisted by Mrs. George Searle, Mrs. Oliver Henkel, Mrs. Frank Maxwell, and Mrs. George Kirtley.

Shopping Around...

With MARIANNE

DOES your winter wardrobe need a pick-up? Most of them do right now, and spring-like touches can be found in collar and cuff sets, fluffy blouses, colorful belts and gay little turbans. . . . The downtown stores are showing all kinds of cheering accents, so perhaps you can find something to make the oldest frock in your wardrobe sit up and take notice.

Marianne

A perky white collar and cuff set will do wonders for your dark dress, and with such a variety of styles to choose from, you're sure to find one to please you. . . . Embroidered petals of white pique can be had in collars and cuffs to fit a variety of necklines. . . . The first flower of spring, narcissus, has been used for the pattern of a V-neck pique collar or vestee. . . . Middie collars have taken on new glory this season—combining lace and pique in a smart and dressy effect. . . . Then for a quaint note, there's the Harlequin collar, which is a flaring ruff of pleated, embroidered batiste, trimmed with lace and black grosgrain ribbon insertions. . . . In case you want to add a more colorful note to that dark frock, tailored vestees of spun rayon, which tub perfectly, can be purchased in aqua, dusty pink, and maize as well as white.

Since Vivien (Scarlett O'Hara) Leigh has appeared on the scene with her small waistline, the gals with tiny midriffs have been pretty proud—and now they can even call attention to these stylish waists with colorful belts, which will lend color to a plain gown. . . . These belts come in several styles of suede and pigtex in the season's newest shades—lime, coral, turquoise, brass hat gold, Hawaiian rose, blue, pink, gray and red.

You can give your old suit a new lease on life, with one of those gay spring blouses. . . . If your taste runs to fussy, feminine things, chiffon blouses fashioned with long full sleeves or short puffed ones and trimmed with tiny pleats or lace will delight you in white or shades of aqua, yellow, light blue, coral and red. . . . The blouse of this month is tailored from crepe (in white, coral or aqua) and accented with rows of stitching on the collar, cuffs and pocket. . . . Eighteen little pearl buttons trim the front of another style tailored crepe blouse, which can be purchased in all the high shades too. . . . And then for a blouse that's really gay, the always-popular paisley print has been done in brighter colors than ever before and fashioned with long full sleeves, peter pan collar and bright buttons.

GROSGRAIN ribbon turbans and French berets, as well as wrap-around jersey turbans are new and smart just now, and I'll wager that if you have one, you'll like it so well you'll continue to wear it all through the spring season. . . . Those of silk grosgrain (turban or beret style) come in multi-colored stripes and all the light pastels, while the jersey wrap-arounds can be purchased in the pastel shades.

Now with all these spring-like accessories, you'll want a light, spring perfume. . . . Floral scents are always nicest for this season—with "Fleurs de Rocaille" as one of the most fragrant of all, being a fresh, blended floral odor. . . . "Country" and "Blue Grass" also lend an airy, spring touch.

AND IN CONCLUSION: Have you seen the new "magictuft" rugs, pillows, crib covers,, seat covers and mats? You can make them yourself and be more than proud of their colorful chenille effect. . . . The design (floral, modernistic and colonial) is stamped on the material, and all you need do is sew the braid on by machine, clip the white threads (which hold the yarn in place) and it all fluffs out to make a solid design. You can choose your own color combinations in bright shades or pastels.

Note: The styles described above are available in Mansfield shops. You can learn where they may be obtained if you will telephone Marianne at The News-Journal between 1 and 2:30 p. m.—Canal 4251.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

"My dear Lillian!" His deep resonant voice came clearly to our ears through the open door. "How delightful to see you! And can you tell me where I can find the Princess Olina? Her mother does not know just where she is, though she says she must be around the house somewhere."

I knew that Lillian would make her answer as long as possible, and I stepped to the side of the Princess Olina, who was standing rigid like a frozen thing, with every muscle tense, and put a compelling hand upon her arm.

"Don't spoil everything!" I adjured her. "Mrs. Underwood is delaying him—I know her tactics—so that you can be prepared for meeting him. Relax, child, and prepare to greet him in such fashion that he will not be chilled and repelled by your attitude. He evidently is in a most exuberant and kindly mood, and is searching for you—very properly—to tell you his news first. For the sake of your mother's happiness, and your own, pretend cheerfulness even if you cannot feel it."

She may have heard all that I had said, but she picked only one sentence for comment.

"To tell me his news first," she repeated. "Then it is true, you think. She has acepted him."

"Remember!" I said sternly. "You may be in exile, but you are still a princess of Transvania. Are you going to meet this news like a gracious princess or like a whining peasant schoolgirl?"

"Thank you," she said quietly, and there was sincerity in the words. "I shall not forget again. If I can have one more minute, I shall be ready to face anything."

"You shall have th t," I told her, and going out of ... room quickly, closed the door behind me. Subconsciously, while I was talking to Olina. I had heard Lillian telling Phil mendaciously that she did not know exactly where Olina was, but that she must be around somewhere. Then Mr. Veritzen spied me, and at his smile of recognition I moved swiftly toward him.

"What a pleasant surprise!" I exclaimed, and then Lillian's voice, with a touch of displeasure in it, recalled the pact I had made with her to pretend slumber in order to bear out the stipulation I had made to him, that because of excessive fatigue I would not be able to attend the rehearsal of my play until the next day.

"I thought you were asleep with orders that you should not be disturbed," she said. "You have no business being out of bed. You have no idea how done out she is," she added, turning to Mr. Veritzen with a confidential air.

I figured that the minute's grace I had given Olina must be nearly up, and I gave Lillian an apologetic smile.

"But Olina didn't know that," I said, "and she came to my room a few minutes ago to discuss something very important to her and to me. So you see I had to awaken."

"So that is where she is," Lillian answered, playing up instantly. "If I had known, Phil, I could have told you before."

"It really doesn't matter in the least," he assured her with elaborate courtesy. "But," turning to me, "is it possible for me to see her now?"

TOLL SIGN IN USE

Hearty, Spicy Spaghetti

By ALICE LYNN BARRY

A spicy dish of spaghetti and chicken livers almost makes a meal. It is made with a clove of garlic, two and one-half cups canned tomatoes, two teaspoons celery salt, teaspoon each sugar, cinnamon and ginger, one-eighth teaspoon thyme, teaspoon cloves, dash of cayenne, one large onion, chopped; one cup beef consomme, one cup cut-up chicken livers, one and one-half tablespoons flour, one cup mushrooms, spaghetti and Parmesan cheese. Mash the garlic clove in a good-sized saucepan and add tomatoes, celery salt, sugar, cinnamon, cloves, ginger, thyme, cayenne pepper and the onion. Allow to simmer for 30 minutes. Then add beef consomme. While this is cooking, melt the butter in a skillet and saute the chicken livers in this. Then add the flour and mushrooms. Pour the contents of the skillet in with the tomato sauce and simmer 15 minutes longer. Mix thoroughly with the spaghetti, which has been cooked until tender, in four quarts of water containing a tablespoon of salt. Serve with Parmesan cheese. A green salad balances this hearty dish.

For escalloped onions and cheese take two cups small boiled onions, four tablespoons each butter and flour, two cups milk, one-fourth teaspoon paprika, teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon celery salt, teaspoon prepared mustard and one-half cup cheese, cut fine. Melt butter in top of double boiler. Add flour and blend. Add milk slowly, stirring constantly. Add seasonings and cheese and cook until creamy, stirring constantly. Place cooked onions in buttered baking dish, pour over sauce and bake 20 minutes in moderate oven.

They Add Zest to Meal.

Spanish potatoes will add zest to any meal. To make this dish use two tablespoons each butter and flour, one and one-half teaspoons salt, one-fourth teaspoon pepper, one-half teaspoon dry mustard, two cups milk, four cups cold boiled potatoes, diced; teaspoon paprika, four tablespoons chopped green pepper, three tablespoons canned tomatoes (drained), two tablespoons chopped onion. Make cream sauce of butter, flour, salt, pepper and mustard, gradually adding milk. To well-blended sauce add potatoes and paprika. Heat through and add chopped vegetables and tomatoes. Heat again.

There have been several requests for a Welsh Rarebit recipe, so here goes with our favorite. Use two tablespoons butter, tablespoon flour, cup of milk, one-half teaspoon salt, dash of black pepper, dash of cayenne pepper, one-half teaspoon paprika, one-half cup grated cheese, teaspoon prepared mustard and one egg. Melt butter and add flour. Mix thoroughly and add milk, salt, pepper, cayenne and paprika. Cook over hot water until thick and add the cheese. When cheese is melted, add the egg, which has been well beaten with the prepard mustard. Cook a minute longer and serve on hot buttered crackers or on toast points.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

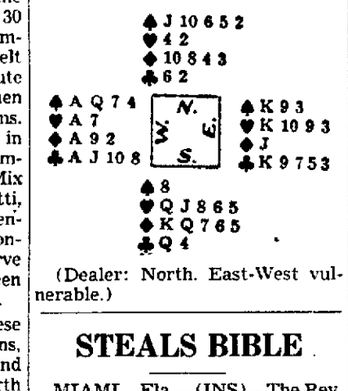
"The Authority on Authorities"

GET IN THE FIRST LICK

When you have two suits worth showing, it generally will pay you to call one of them at your earliest opportunity, so that your next bid will enable your partner to know about both of them. That is especially important in third hand position, after your partner has passed and you know therefore that the side possesses little of value except distribution. By following that policy, you will get into many a profitable contract and also will put your side in position to make a valuable sacrifice bid if your partner fits one of the suits with length in an otherwise worthless hand.



(Dealer: North. East-West vulnerable.)

This deal proved important in a team-of-four match. At one table the first three players passed. West opening with 2-No Trumps. After East overcalled with 3-Clubs, South did not dare come in with one of his suits, so passed. West then bid 3-Spades, East 4-Hearts, West 4-No Trumps (Blackwood), East, of course, 5-Clubs, showing no aces; West 5-No Trumps (Blackwood), East 6-Spades, showing three kings, then West 7-Clubs. It was made easily, the West hand being set up by ruffing two diamonds and a spade.

South opened at the other table with 1-Heart because of his two suits in about an average hand. West doubled, East bid 2-Clubs, South 2-Diamonds, and then followed about the same bidding as at the other table, until East and West reached 7-Clubs. At that stage North opened his mouth for the first time, bidding 7-Diamonds as a sacrifice, since he knew about his partner's two suits. West doubled, and it was set six tricks, giving East and West 1,100 points. This was great, though, for North-South, as the grand slam made by their team mates at the other table produced a 1,500 bonus, 500 for game and 140 for tricks—total, 2,140 points. Thus the opening bid by South proved to be worth a net or 1,040 points to the side.

Tomorrow's Problem.

(Dealer: West. North-South vulnerable.)

What principle of successful bidding enables South to get into 3-No Trumps on this deal, with both sides calling soundly?

COOLIDGE FOE TURNS ABOUT

NORTHAMPTON, Mass.—(UP)—When the late President Calvin Coolidge lived here, he and former Mayor William H. Feiker were bitter political foes. Now Feiker is reported to be writing a life story of Mr. Coolidge because of his dislike of a "critical book on him by William Allen White."

HOROSCOPE

For Thursday, January 25.

WHILE this may be a day of excellent promise, with major interests moving at high pressure, there also are signs of sudden disruptions and upsets of devastating force. The outcome will depend upon the restraint, sagacity and acumen brought to bear on critical situations in which high objectives and interests are at stake. Through carelessness, impetuosity and over-enthusiasm there might be sharp reversals, with domestic reactions.

Those whose birthday it is, although promised a year of excellent opportunity for high attainments and fulfilled ambitions, are also likely to defeat such favorable auguries by rash, over-zealous or too strenuous modes of attack, thus precipitating drastic reversals. These may have devastating effect on the private relations. Make changes with due consideration.

A child born on this day may be efficient, energetic and ambitious, but restless or erratic tendencies may provoke its defeat, as its fine qualities may rate but mediocre success.

PITY poor Mr. Slapnicka of the Cleveland Indians. First he wanted Lee Grissom on waivers from the Cincinnati Reds and the eccentric southpaw, as he admitted, "slipped through his hands" and into those of the New York Yankees Then he thought he'd like to draft Russ Bevel, a young infielder with the New Orleans Pels, with whom the Indians once had a working agreement Commissioner Landis decided that "Slap" had no claims on Russ and General Manager Warren Giles, who lets little slip through his fingers, did the drafting. If Bevel clicks with the Reds, Slapnicka will have another reason to weep . . . They're saying that Charley Gilbert, the old infielder, who went to Toledo with the understanding that he'd get a shot at the pilot's post if a change came, put Judge Landis wise to the Detroit situation, which resulted in the destruction of the Tigers' farm system. When Fred Haney, the Toledo pilot, was up with the Brown's, Gilbert was forgotten . . Had Landis not corrected the mistake which made Pitcher Paul Trout of the Tigers a free agent, the Indians would not have been alone in the bidding. The Yankees were set to go the limit for the pitcher.

Answers Bell for 113th Time at Garden Tonight Against Montanez.

By HARRY FERGUSON

But the old, old saying in the world of the leather-fisted men—"String along with the champion until he lets you down"—have made Armstrong a 2½ to 1 favorite despite the fact that he will give away seven pounds in weight and two precious years in age.

The Montanez men, and there are plenty of 'em, insist their boy will whale away at the body until Armstrong's every rib aches and he gets that sickly feeling around the stomach. There is something in what they say, too, for this Montanez, born 25 years ago in Cayay, Puerto Rico, is a tough, rib-cracking body puncher who probably deserves shorter odds than 2½ to 1 Loser in only five of the 95 bouts he has had. Montanez comes up to this one hungry for a title and the fame and fortune it would bring

Win or lose tonight, Armstrong is getting close to the end of the trail. There is plenty of money in the bank and the little colored man already is looking forward to the time when he can retire and devote all his time to, of all things, literature. He writes poetry and now is working on the story of his life which he plans to call "When the Crowd Stops Roaring."

* * *

Today he is the only man who ever held the featheweight, lightweight and welterweight titles at the same time Of those three titles only the welterweight is left and Henry the Hammer will be in there hammering tonight to keep it. He fought 'em all, everything from featherweights to middleweights and if he comes out on top this evening he may delay his retirement long enough to take one whirl at the middleweight.

BUFFALO HUNT OF TODAY JOKE TO OLD TIMERS

Arizona Hunting Permits to Go to 50 Sportsmen to Thin Out Herds.

(By United Press)

PHOENIX, Ariz. — Modern sportsmen may get a big kick out of it, but Buffalo Bill Cody and other old-time plainsmen would be amused if they could watch the way in which buffalo are "hunted" today.

In Arizona, as in other parts of the Great Plains region, the thousands of buffalo which once roamed the flatlands have been reduced to a few hundreds. Because of this the Arizona state game department each year selects a certain number of the animals—usually about 20—that may be killed.

Buffalo selected for the "hunt" are old, ill-tempered bulls, barren or aged cows and pintos, the result of cross-breeding between buffalo and Hereford cattle which graze on the plains.

Herd Larger This Year.

This year, because of an increase in the herd to about 250, fifty hunters will be allowed to "hunt" for the huge 2,000 pound animals.

When the time for the "hunt" is at hand, cowboys separate the bison marked for death and the hunters then bank away at 25 yards until a vital spot is hit.

The mode of the hunting may have changed radically since the days when Buffalo Bill chased the speeding animals and shot from horseback—but so many sportsmen want to take part in the supervised kill that the state has to conduct a lottery to determine who will get the privilege.

A few old timers who remember buffalo hunts of the "good old days" 'sneer at the new method and say it's about the same as shooting a roped cow in the pasture in back of the barn.

The state allows the sportsmen to keep the head, hide and one quarter of the meat from the kill. The remaining portions are sold and the proceeds used to maintain the herd.

The hunt this year will be conducted in two parts—one group of 25 hunters leaving the latter part of January while the remaining group hunts from Feb. 16 to 19.

Nucleus of Arizona's herd, which roams the unfenced tract of land north of the Grand Canyon of the Colorado to the Utah state border, was purchased in 1926 from James Owen for $10,000.

Notary Cited On Contempt Charge, Hearing Friday

W. O. Burkholder, 94 South Main street, had been cited today for contempt of court as the result of his alleged violation of an order issued early last year against illegal law practice.

Accused by the Richland County Bar association of preparing a land deed without legal authority, Burkholder was ordered to appear before Judge C. H. Huston at 2:30 p. m. Friday on the contempt charge.

Burkholder was among the 40 Richland county notaries who were enjoined last year from the illegal practice of law. A number of them have been cited for contempt since then and fined by Judge Huston.

Burkholder was ordered into court as the result of charges filed by Attys. W. H. Gifford, John C. O'Donnell; and George W. Biddle, comprising a committee of the county bar association.

FAVOR STEELS, AIRCRAFTS IN SLOW TRADING

Traders Give Metal and Plane Shares Boost After Quiet Opening.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK--Traders turned favor on the steel and aircraft shares today, and along with them, other divisions crept slowly upward. The opening was quiet and more or less mixed.

Higher were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Youngstown, Chrysler, Douglas Aircraft, United Aircraft, American Airlines, Du Pont, Sears Roebuck, and Colgate Palmolive. General Motors was hesitant.

While news in general failed to make much impression on the slow trading there was feeling of anxiety in Wall Street over the possibility of increased taxation for business, coming on top of Secretary Morgenthau's statement advocating federal economy and more taxes as a means of balancing the budget.

Foreign security markets were higher. Bonds were firm. Commodities tended higher.

Students of the oils were disappointed by the report that gasoline stocks last week, despite a cut in production, rose about 1,500,000 barrels to a potential surplus for this time of year of about 10,000,000 barrels. Absence of foreign demand and lack of shipping were given as causes for the increase.

YOUTH, 19, HELD

Charged With Burglarizing of Lucas School.

A 19-year-old Lucas youth was held in the county jail today for investigation in connection with the burglarizing of the Lucas school last Saturday night.

Deputy Sheriff Glenn P. Freeman, arrested the youth, who is unemployed, at his home yesterday after he had displayed an unusual amount of money.

Freeman said the boy, on probation from the probate court for a similar offense, denied any connection with the crime. He said he obtained the money from a relative.

The school was entered by scaling the front of the building and smashing a second floor window. A steel filing cabinet was broken open and about $8 in cash and three class rings taken.

'ROOSEVELT TO LOSE'--LEWIS

CIO Leader Predicts Dems in for Defeat If President Will Run Again.

between the coalescent interests," he added.

But, he said, "the Democratic pary and its leadership have not preserved its faith.

"In the last three years, labor has not been given representation in the cabinet, nor in the administrative or policy making agencies of government. The curren, administration has not sought nor seriously entertained the advice or views of labor upon the question of national unemployment or lesser questions affecting domestic economy, internal taxation, foreign trade, military and naval expansion, relations with foreign nations or the issues of war or peace.

"Labor today has no point of contact with the Democratic administration in power except for casual occasional interviews which are granted its individual leaders. In the congress, the unrestrained baiting and defaming of labor by the Democratic majority has become a pastime, never subject to rebuke by the titular or actual leaders of the party."

'Lose Confidence.'

Lewis asserted that the Democratic party "is in default to the American people" and that labor and the people are losing confidence.

After asserting that congress was without a program, "except to enact necessary appropriations in ample time to engage in the national quadrennial political marathon," Lewis continued:

"I am one who believes that President Roosevelt will not be a candidate for re-election. Conceding that the Democratic national convention could be coerced or dragooned into re-nominating him, I am convinced that with the conditions now confronting the nation and the dissatisfaction now permeating the minds of the people his candidacy would result in ignominious defeat."

The CIO chieftain said that Illinois, Ohio, Indiana, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York were "trending toward the Republican column in the campaign year of 1940."

"This trend," he added, "can be corrected and the Republican party prevented from winning only by an accord between the Democratic party and organized labor, and the adoption of an intelligent and rational program to be written into the platform of the Democratic party and placed before the American people as the issues of the election. Even then guarantees of good faith and fulfillment of party promises would have to be made to labor and the people by responsible Democratic leaders."

Lewis also declared that the Democratic party after seven years "finds itself without solution for the major questions of unemployment, low national income, mounting internal debt, increasing direct and consumer taxation and restricted foreign markets. There still exists the same national unhappiness that it faced seven years ago."

circling petitions, and William Haas, Delaware, former assistant attorney general.

All candidates must have their petitions on file with the Richland county election board by 6:30 p. m. Saturday. The primary election will be held Feb. 6, and the final election Feb. 27.

Meanwhile, Republican leaders were reported to be convening in Mt. Vernon today to decide whether they would throw the party organization's support behind any one candidate.

McGregor is reported to have the unofficial backing of the party organization. Woodward has strong support from the Townsend organization.

Cost of the special 17th district primary and election which he estimated will cost the county in excess of $10,000 was scored again today by C. L. Mitchel, chairman of the board of county commissioners.

"It's a crime that the taxpayers should have to suffer this burden when the election could very easily have been held on the same dates as the regular election," he said.

He criticized Gov. Bricker's excuse that the election call was mandatory, pointing out that had the governor followed the state statutes he would have called the election last fall in the 22nd district following the death of C. C. Bolton, Cleveland Republican.

Mitchell pointed out that the country had appropriated $24,500 for the regular election this year, explaining that as the result of the special election, the cost of which must be met from the county's general fund, some services would have to be curtailed.

CHINESE SPURN PROPAGANDA BY JAPS ON PEACE

Now United Nation Ready to Fight on Until Invader Has Been Defeated.

(Editor's Note: The leaders of China almost without exception, remain loyal to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek and none will "surrender" to the "puppet regime" of Wang Ching-Wei, according to James P. Young, International News Service correspondent in Tokyo. The following article, third of a series of six, was cabled to New York by Young after a 9,000-mile trip through the Chinese republic and prior to his recent detention by Tokyo authorities.)

By JAMES R. YOUNG
(INS Staff Correspondent)

Out of misfortune, defeats and unparalleled disaster has developed a new and free China centering at Chungking, deep in the western mountains of what was once the 13th century Chinese kingdom of Pah.

Peace rumors flooding the press wires from Japanese sources fade in the perpetual mist that hangs over the unusual world capital of Chungking.

No puppet regime can defeat Chungking leaders or associates.

A Poor Puppet Choice.

Wang Ching-Wei, who once tried to assassinate the prince regent of China, at Peking, has been selected by Japanese "to save the Chinese people from their misery."

Wang Ching-Wei's abortive attempts at Peking were levelled at the father of the present emperor of Manchukuo—once known in newspaper files as Henry Pu Yi.

Judging from many, many interviews with Chinese inside and outside the government, not one favors Wang Ching-Wei. No peace unless an honorable peace.

—The Japanese people, and they were profoundly admired by the thousands of Chinese educated in Japan, have suffered a loss of their many fine qualities because their army has indulged in brutal aggression and barbarous destruction.

The people of Japan are led to believe that China now wants peace, that the Chinese are tired of war.

Chinese want peace They want business restored. They want their homes. They want their families united. They are tired of war but they will continue supporting the campaign while Japan's army is in China. They definitely will not support Wang Ching-Wei. He is the Benedict Arnold—the traitor of traitors among all Chinese.

Japs Want Peace, Too.

Japan wants peace as well. The peace rumor offensive of recent weeks, emanating in Japanese circles is proof of this desire.

Yet China goes on and anyone witnessing the struggle against odds admires and is inspired by the Chinese attempt to thwart the Japanese attacks. The people realize a common peril and have rallied to the support of their government. Japan made this support possible.

Japan, pressed by a growing budget, domestic economic restrictions, curtailment of her export trade, the stiffening American attitude, higher losses of men in the field from battles and sickness, internal cabinet discord and strife between Tokyo and Shanghai leaders over the inauguration of a new puppet government requires that peace be attained quickly if at all possible.

Unfortunately the Japanese in Tokyo do not know the minds of the Chinese in Chungking.

The Japanese attempt to link Chungking with peace reports has been crude. Thousands of words are being wired over Japanese lines intimating that Chungking is seeking third power mediation for peace.

Nothing is further from the truth. The peace reports have as much truth as have some of the claimed military successes.

The manufacturing by Japanese of reports that the American or British ambassadors are mediating or acting as traditional Japanese fashion go-between is rumor mongering. Japanese spokesmen, like parrots, deny their own allegations, awaiting echoes from Chungking—which would be, if Chungking answered at all, a well known Bronx phrase.

No satisfactory solution to the Sino-Japanese conflict is seen in the near future.

This renewed confidence of the Chinese people, and they are remarkably well informed about the Japanese, is indicative of the feeling which has encouraged Chungking leaders in their latest plenary Kuomintang session to continue resistance, knowing the nation is with them.

Japs Mislead Selves.

Japanese circles hope that after Wang Chang-Wei, if he lives, inaugurates his government that pressure from the suspected peace elements in Chungking will force the generalissimo to negotiate with the Japanese puppet The Japanese are misleading themselves into thinking such thoughts. The Japanese thought—police should detain people for thinking such things.

Certain Japanese groups believe Ching-Wei will act as an intermediary to conclude a compromise arrangement between Chungking and Tokyo, creating for himself the role of savior of the Chinese people and receiving their plaudits for having ended the conflict. No responsible person in Chungking or in China would deal with Wang Ching-Wei.

Chungking leaders look at the question in this manner: What is there to gain by listening to the Japanese? The nation is united. What have the Japanese to offer? It is their duty to leave the country. They are having more difficulties than the Chinese in this war at this moment. Time is favoring the Chinese, plus man power, new resources, and better financial conditions.

The appeasement offensive toward Chungking and Moscow is looked upon as Japanese bait. The Chinese believes the Washington factor and Japan's inter problems will favor Chungking. So why should Chungking consider peace proposals. (put out, but the next day denied, by Japanese spokesmen), they ask.

Japan reports many Chinese wish to join the Wang Ching-Wei peace movement Foreign observers do not find Chinese showing active or open flirtation with the puppet regime in its armored village in Shanghai next to the badlands of vice and opium under the Japanse controlled city government.

Japanese err when they argue that the Chinese are leaning to Wang and the peace ideas. They want peace but not through Wang. The highest of politicians, although they may disagree with the generalissimo, are loyal to Chungking, and none desire peace via the surrender route.

BORAH TACTICS IN HOT COURT FIGHT RELATED

He Engineered Strategy and Favored Van Devanter's Leaving Bench.

(Editor's Note. In directing the strategy in the epic supreme court fight, Senator Borah opposed any open coalition of Democrats and Republicans. The tactics he prescribed and the part he played are related in the following article in a series by William K. Hutchinson, long-time confidant of the famed "Lion of Idaho.")

WASHINGTON — Though he master-minded the senate's rejection of President Roosevelt's supreme court bill in 1937, William Edgar Borah shied from personal glory and generously credited the victory to the "love of the American people for their institutions."

Throughout the fight, he dictated to me notes of each major step. His final words in that record were uttered on the afternoon of the president's defeat. In his hour of victory, I asked him what he was thinking of. He replied:

"Only this. The president made a grave mistake in proposing to pack the supreme court. He underestimated the love of the American people for their own institutions."

Borah referred to the hundreds of thousands of letters and telegrams that ordinary people sent to their congressmen, protesting against the bill. He referred to the thousands of volunteer lawyers and scholars who did research work for the opposition. He referred to the scores of lawyers, educators and churchmen who came forth to spread their opposition on the records of the public hearings. And he referred to his own colleagues, Republican and Democrat, who fought largely under his strategical advice.

Now that it will not embarrass him in his personal relations with the president, I can tell the part he played among the Democrats.

Senator Frederick Van Nuys (D) of Indiana, was the nominal leader of the opposition at the start. But Borah kept urging Senator Burton K. Wheeler (D) of Montana, to take over the leadership. Meanwhile, Ben Stern, secretary to Van Nuys, and Senator Edward R. Burke (D) of Nebraska, were largely responsible for producing opposition witnesses at the hearings.

All held frequent conferences with Borah. His counsel was followed time and again.

But there was one major question disturbing the Democratic opposition forces. It was a demand from many of their own members for agreement on a constitutional amendment as a substitute for the president's plan. Some Democrats insisted they could not oppose the president without offering a substitute.

It was in this field Borah displayed his master strategy. His dictum was:

"Agree on nothing. Speak of constitutional amendments in the vaguest terms. Any senator who wishes to introduce a constitutional amendment, let him do so, but we must whip this proposal of the president on its merits."

Borah recalled to me how Senator Henry Cabot Lodge (R) of Massachusetts, leader of the opposition to the Wilson league of nations covenant, had insisted back in 1920 that the opponents must offer a substitute if they intended to defeat the Wilson plan. He added:

"I told Lodge then I'd never agree to anything taking us into the League of Nations. I told him we could arouse public opinion to the point where we could defeat the league on its merits. Long afterward he agreed with me, though he did propose the reservations that were used as a vehicle to defeat American entry into the league.

Well, in this fight, you'll soon learn that Roosevelt hasn't anything like the prestige Wilson enjoyed. Wilson was regarded as a Messiah; Roosevelt only as a Santa Claus. Wilson had a tremendously popular issue. Roosevelt has one which is unpopular right now. We'll defeat him on the merits."

And they did, but many Democrats offered substitute plans—including Wheeler and Burke.

But, as Borah advised, the opposition avoided agreement on any single amendment or substitute.

The president's program received many major blows during the five months' battle. One of them was the retirement of associate Justice Willis Van Devanter, of Wyoming, announced May 18, effective June 2.

His announcement was made the very day the senate judiciary committee rejected the president's bill, paving the way for its final defeat. It served to rob the president of one of his major claims—that in over four years in the White House, he had never appointed a justice to the court.

Borah told me two interesting facts about the Van Devanter retirement. They are that the move was opposed by leaders of the senate opposition to the court bill and by the other justices of the supreme court.

I probed Borah many times about his part in the retirement but his usual reply was:

"Well, guess for yourself. We live in the same apartment house."

At any rate, Borah and Rep. Hatton Sumners (D) of Texas, a close friend of Van Devanter conferred five times in the week before the announcement. After one of these conferences, Borah told Wheeler, then the elected chairman of the opposition, that Van Devanter was ready to retire if that act would not interfere with the senate fight.

Wheeler called a conference of the opposition and asked his colleagues how they felt about such a move. There was much heated denunciation of it, one senator asking:

"Why in hell shall we sacrifice our political lives making this fight to save the court if the members of that court haven't enough guts to stand up under a little fire?"

But Borah favored the retirement as a strategical move. Despite divided opinion among opposition senators over the strategy, Van Devanter did retire. I asked Borah once point-blank whether he "influenced" it. He replied:

"I got the word to him."

And when Van Devanter told his supreme court colleagues he was about to retire, he too ran into a storm of protests. But Van Devanter silenced this, his friends told Borah, by simply saying:

"Borah favors it."

(Tomorrow — Borah's final strategy as defeat of court bill loomed.)

Traces Progress Science Has Made For Agriculture

Ways in which scientific agriculture has been developed in Ohio, through work being done at the agricultural experiment station in Wooster were explained at Tuesday's Rotary club meeting by C. W. Ellenwood, who is associated with the station.

During the course of his address Ellenwood told of the early establishing of land grant colleges in Ohio, followed by plans for research work which resulted in establishing the experiment station at Wooster as the fifth in the United States.

The speaker stated that the Wooster station, with its 1,000-acre farm, is conducted as a fact-finding institution rather than as a model farm, and that its negative results, as well as its successes, are regarded as important experiments.

Development of wheat varieties suitable to Ohio climate have brought better quality and an increased yield of several bushels per acre, he stated. Other subjects of study have been better feeding of stock and the influence of light on plant growth.

John G. Routzon was program chairman of the meeting and in introducing the speaker told of the importance and value of Richland county's diversified agricultural products and stressed the mutual interests of urban and rural residents.

Three of the four Ohio National Guard officers who will leave Feb. 3 for three months field training at Ft. Sill, Oklahoma, will be Mansfielders, marking the first time that Mansfield has had more than one officer in the honorary group

Assigned to the training course from Mansfield were Capt. R. R. Crichfield, 78 Arthur avenue; First Lieut. Harry P. Snyder, 12 East Prospect street, and First Lieut. W. Dale Uhlich, 235 Rae avenue, Crichfield is captain of the service battery at Bucyrus.

Assignments are made by the U. S. Milita bureau on recommendations of the adjutant general To qualify for the course officers must complete three correspondence courses and show outstanding leadership.

Only three Mansfield officers have been assigned to the Ft. Sill training course since 1921. The training includes actual firing and artillery maneuvers.

The Mansfield officers and their wives will make the trip to Oklahoma by motor. They will be gone three months.

Potatoes are the chief crop of Maine.

DRIVERS ESCAPE

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—(INS)—A tiny midget home-built auto and a heavy bread truck had a collision here. The little two-cylindered contraption was hardly damaged and the bread truck was almost totally destroyed. The drivers of both vehicles personally came out even—they were both sent to the hospital for minor treatment.

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 24, 1940.

It's going around again—that zero tip—"Red Flannel to win, starting from scratch."

Ohio is fortunate, however, in escaping that weather boast, "The thermometer is way up to zero."

Not the least of the offenses of those "Christian Front" malcontents was their insolence in choosing such a name.

Better Fire Protection Needed

WHILE Mansfield has thus far been so fortunate as to escape having such destructive fires as have occurred in a number of cities during the recent cold wave, it should not be ignored that the fire danger is constant and that customary causes of fires should not be neglected.

Faulty heating plants, defective wiring and possible careless construction of some new homes appear to account for a large percentage of fires in Mansfield last year, according to the report of Fire Chief Seeburger, who recommends increases in fire department personnel and adoption of a building code which would prescribe construction standards for new homes.

Also among Mansfield's recognized needs for a number of years has been an additional fire station intended to serve the west and southwest sections of the city, as well as more adequate water service available for emergency use in the event of such a conflagration as has visited the business sections of the city on several occasions in past years.

It has been frequently stated, by persons who have made a study of the situation, that the people of Mansfield are paying—in high insurance rates—for the fire protection they do not have, and if this is the case it would appear that immediate steps should be taken to correct this condition.

With the recommendations of Fire Chief Seeburger as a basis there is no apparent reason why city officials, the Chamber of Commerce, and other interested citizens should not be able to work out practicable plans for better fire protection for Mansfield homes, industries and commercial buildings. It is too important a matter to be longer neglected.

Stop Signs Mean 'Stop'

DISREGARD of stop signs on secondary roads entering or intersecting main highways has been responsible for so many collisions—and sometimes fatalities—that it may be wondered why a considerable number of motorists continue to offend in this way.

Records of the state highway patrol, however, show this to be an all-too-common practice in Richland and vicinity counties, and a determined effort is now being made to substantially reduce this dangerous habit.

Observation indicates that it is inexperienced, incompetent and occasional drivers who are most likely to drive from a side road or lane onto a much-traveled highway without regard for the likelihood of another car being too close to avoid a crash.

There is a state law against this, of course, and the driver who fails to bring his car to a full stop before entering a main highway is not only liable to arrest and fine but can also be held responsible for injuries and property damages that result from this violation of law.

Members of the state highway patrol are to be commended for their increasing vigilance in detecting motoring offenses of this kind and in making arrests when the circumstances justify. Only through enforcement, education and increase in voluntary observance of traffic laws can motor crashes and fatalities be substantially reduced.

World-Wide Exploring

PREHISTORIC bones, Mayan stones with carvings, two-inch ants, waterfalls ten times as high as Niagara Falls, the deepest hole in the ocean, kangaroos that climb trees, ancient manuscripts, curious lizards, birds and fish new to science, mountains scaled and stratosphere studied—

All that is just part of the list of "important finds in many fields" that rewarded archeologists and explorers all over the world in 1939. There were expeditions in the Arctic and the Antarctic, in Mexico, in ancient Tibet and China, in the high atmosphere above Baltimore, in the depths of the sea, in New Guinea and in the jungles of Brazil.

Scientists will spend years studying, analyzing, classifying the materials they have brought home, the measurements they have made, the facts noted in their travel and delving. All of it will contribute in some way to the total of man's knowledge and understanding of the earth on which he lives and the civilizations that have preceded ours.

Variations In Speech

ABSENCE of uniformity in speech, as detected in each community, and more obviously in different parts of the United States, is quite disturbing to some folks who contend that there should be more of a sameness in language and pronunciation through the country.

Radio has tended to attract more attention to this subject and it is regettable that greater confidence cannot be placed in the correctness of radio pronunciation and use of words.

As the matter now stands it is not difficult for a student of phonology to detect, from a person's speech, approximately what part of the United States he is from, each having peculiarities of pronunciation, dialect, accent, voice modulation, or use of revealing idioms and provincialisms.

Except for the advantages of an education in establishing correctness of pronunciation, use of words and proper grammatical construction, it may be doubted if anything would be gained by such standardization of speech as might remove much of its beauty and individuality.

It might be worthwhile, however, to have a little closer check-up on radio grammar and pronunciation.

Dependent Wild Ducks

NOW COMES the wild duck problem, which is getting all mixed up with sentiment and charity. When the ducks happen to remain around too long in northern areas instead of migrating southward according to schedule, people start feeding them. Then next year they naturally come back and stick around waiting to be fed again. Thus it becomes a habit which runs into a lot of grain and money—and once established, it's hard to stop.

Just like various new kinds of charity for human beings that have been developed in recent years. Whether with humans or birds or animals, benevolence soon becomes regarded as a vested right.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—Times change and opinions undergo a metamorphosis, no less among cities than with anyone else. It was last September a year ago, I believe, that a strange, jerky, wacky revue called Hellzapoppin opened, and all but two of the critics panned it. They said it was dull. They said it was old stuff. They couldn't be bothered much.

But this thing just happened to be one of those great, instantaneous hits that the public loved, and it earned a fortune for Oley Olsen and Chic Johnson, its stars and its producers.

After a year on Broadway, Olsen and Johnson—without missing a performance, announced a "new" version of Hellzapoppin—but with one or two simple variations it remained, substantially, the same slap-happy, pie throwing mardi gras of a year ago.

This time, however, the critics were very generous with their praise. If you were here for the original opening, and if you could have read the controversy between one critic who loved it and the rest who despised it, this change of attitude would, to say the least, attract your attention. And so the question naturally rises, if it was lousy last year, what makes it so good this year? That's a question that only the critics themselves can answer.

THE shortest street in all New York is Edgar street, which is so tiny that it hasn't got a single number. Edgar is the connecting link between Trinity Place and Greenwich street. . . . This was overheard in the lobby of the Capitol: Boy: "Where do you want to sit?" . . . Girl: "Oh, get the balcony; my eyesight's good, even if your pocketbook isn't." . . . Margie Hart, now queen of the burlesque strips, earns an income in excess of $25,000 a year. So great a favorite is she with burlesque patrons that she is known as "The Poor Man's Garbo."

Advice to song-writers: "All roads lead to Rome, so the one you should take is the one nearest to you."

Quotation: "The Hotel Algonquin is the warmest spot in the coldest city in the world."—Jim Tully.

PERHAPS the nicest fireplace in Manhattan (this is strictly my own opinion) is the one at the Fairway Yacht club, 52nd street and East River. It is a huge, open thing giving off the deep warmth of great burning logs, but what makes it so unique is this:

The Yacht club itself is in a building that has 14 stories. But the club only occupies four or five of these stories. Since they could not have a chimney rising fourteen stories, they designed this fireplace to have no chimney at all. It is therefore governed by a series of electric drafts, which draw the smoke down and back, then up, then down again and out into the open. Just imagine a business chart during the middle-depression years, when gains and losses were alternately recorded, and you will understand how it works. I doubt if there is another like it to be found anywhere.

Dewey's Tax Philosophy Awaited

—By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON — Perhaps the most interesting single development in the presidential campaign now getting under way will be some speech to be made by Thomas E. Dewey revealing his philosophy about taxation, relief and economics.

It is likely to be interesting because of the wild rumors Washington has been hearing, mostly from downtown New Yorkers. If any fraction of what they have been saying is true, most conservative Republicans will be thumbs down on the New York district attorney. If he should follow the line of the Minneapolis speech, there are a great many shrewd politicians who think it will be very difficult to beat him for the nomination.

WHAT gives any observer here pause is the tremendous sentiment against Dewey which seems to exist among conservative New York Republicans—not Republican leaders, particularly, but Republican business men and financiers.

The wild things they are saying about Dewey's philosophy may not be true, observers admit, but there must be SOME reason why they are so strongly against him. When it is eventually made clear just what the motive is, the situation will be clarified.

Conceivably, the downtown New York opposition to Dewey might prove an enormous asset in the rest of the country. But certainly it is also possible that the same reason which would turn conservative New Yorkers against him might also result in G. O. P. delegates from other states going against him.

One New Yorker attacking Dewey told friends in Washington that Dewey thinks the government should take ALL of every income above $5,000 a year. Dewey has never said anything to that effect in public. Presumably, if that is an accurate statement of his economic philosophy, he will advocate it in some speech to be made before the presidential primaries are held.

This seems logical because if Dewey really believes that, which the writer very much doubts, he would also believe that it was good political doctrine. It would be calculated to appeal to the "underprivileged" especially if, as is also stated, Dewey would want to use the resulting revenue for the benefit of the underprivileged.

In a way it would be seeing the New Deal and raising it plenty.

CANDIDATES generally try to avoid being smoked out in advance on issues. They like to figure "timing." But Mr. Dewey will not be able to wait until he sees whether the Democrats renominate Roosevelt, name another New Dealer, or place a conservative at the head of their ticket before making his position on several essential issues very clear. He will have to do it before the first important primary test in which he meets Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio, and Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan.

He will be constrained to do so, if for no other reason, because at present he is getting all the disadvantages of his alleged radical views, and none of the advantages. He is losing votes among the more-than-$5,000-a-year Republicans, who may not be so numerous as their poorer brethren, but have more influence.

Their contacts with the downtown New York element that is against Dewey may seem nebulous, but is very real just the same. He is not gaining votes from the underprivileged on this sort of thing because they don't know it. He is showing strength in the polls because of general approval of his record in New York because he is a new face and name in politics, and because of his appeal.

What Harm From Tight Corsets?

—By DR. CLENDENING

Have tight corsets proved harmful?

When the present corset fad came in, a wail went up from the crepe hangers and dire results were predicted for this generation as a result of tight lacing.

As I remember it, tight corsets began to be fashionable almost a year ago. Enough time has, therefore, gone by to give us a chance to find out whether these predictions have any real basis. I saw in a magazine this week a long, sad story about the effects which it had on women, with pictures of young girls tightly laced and showing by the expressions on their faces excruciating anguish.

In a clinic which admits nearly 100,000 patients a year, I find that not one such case has been observed. In two large, fashionable hospitals in New York and one large, fashionable hospital in Chicago (I emphasize "fashionable" because the alleged victim of the tight-lacing fad would be more likely to terminate here) my inquiries revealed also no real grounds for the fears that had been expressed.

During my professional career I have gone through one other panic of this kind. In an earlier day I used to be requisitioned to pull the strings of my mother's corsets. My father always predicted that this would bring her to an untimely grave. She died at 83.

What does "being ticklish" mean?

This is, indeed, a mystery. The problem consists in explaining why a person will be extremely sensitive to the intrusion of the fingers of another party, while not feeling any discomfort from rubbing himself on the ticklish spots with his own fingers.

The learned Journal of the American Medical Association says: "Most people have what is known as a deep tickling reflex which is brought about by peripheral stimuli not self-induced and results in laughter. It is elicited by stimulation of the end organs of certain large tendons or aponeuroses, or of the periosteum of certain bones, especially the ribs. The areas in which such pressure produces laughter are the lateral walls of the thorax, axillae, abdomen and iliac fossae."

Laughter seems to be the real crux of the matter because it temporarily diminishes the tonus of all the voluntary muscles. You do not become ticklish unless you laugh. Physiologists have explained that the reason laughter does not occur when the stimulation is self-induced is due to the fact that the individual is not prepared to laugh. Which amounts, I suppose, to saying in non-technical language, that some people are ticklish and some people are not.

Watching Trends

—By PRESTON GROVER

WASHINGTON — Congress has met and is much dismayed by one of the biggest questions it will have to decide in connection with the European war—until the hour when it may have to decide whether the U. S. goes into the war itself.

The question: Shall this government open its purse to help the Allies?

True enough that question, in just so many words, has not been put either before the congress or the country at large.

Instead it has arisen in the form of the issue over the loan to Finland. Yet every word and act of congressional leaders discloses how they recognize it.

Senator George of Georgia made the most daring declaration of the issue. He told the senate bluntly that if the country is going to lend money to nations at war it ought to take the responsibility itself and not pass it on to Jesse Jones, federal loan administrator.

His words sounded strangely like those of William Jennings Bryan when, as secretary of state during the early months of the World war and prior to U. S. entry, Bryan cautioned against lending money to the belligerents. In a private message, not published until years later, he told President Wilson that money was "the greatest contraband of all," because it controlled all other contraband.

Allied Pressure?

SPEAKING of the proposed loan to Finland, Senator George said:

"It is no different, on a sound basis of international law, than if we sent a battleship to Finland."

"If we lift the restrictions in the Neutrality act," he said, "it is easy to see we have destroyed the very heart of the Neutrality act.

"The hour approaches when the war between Germany and France and England becomes more acute and the pressure becomes more intense to break down the restrictions on extending credit."

It is a safe bet that England and France already are putting the bee on administration officials to shake down the restrictions on credit. That is assuming that their course in this war is running parallel to their course in the last one. Those things are not done boldly or bluntly but both sides understand what is afoot.

It was more than a year before the walls broke down last time, although there were minor crumblings within a few months. But after much backing and filling, the treasury permitted Britain and France to float a half-billion dollar public loan in this country in October, 1915. That was a year and a quarter after the war started. They were short of ready cash and such bank credit as they could reach was about used up.

This War Is Costly.

RESOURCES of England and France are not greatly different this time. Now, as before, they are having to pay cash for what they buy over here. Already Sir John Simon, British chancellor of the exchequer, has said this is going to be the most expensive war England has known. He didn't exclude the last war.

Currently the senate is agitated over whether it can make a loan to Finland without seeming to. Already the Export-Import bank has made a $10,000,000 loan to a Finnish corporation. By a narrow margin it perhaps escapes being a loan directly to the Finnish government. Also it has strings tied to it which prohibit its use for buying arms and implements of war. President Roosevelt, in a letter to the congress, disclosed he was going little farther in that direction without congressional sanction, which he asked.

Technically the loans are proposed on the assumption that they are to promote export of excess Yankee groceries and manufactures, but the senate went officially on record as recognizing that bigger fish than that were in the pond. The letter and the various bills concerned with Finnish loans were sent to the banking and currency committee. That is in compliance with the technical front. But, by agreement, they will go thereafter to the foreign relations committee where only one question will be at issue:

"Do we, or don't we?"

As Others See It

Observation.

Here and there you meet a type who thinks a radio news broadcaster reading it from a newspaper, is "more accurate" than a newspaper.—Detroit News.

WASHINGTON Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—The president's quiet efforts to ease Secretary Harry Woodring out of the cabinet by offering him another job continue to prove unavailing. The little Kansan refuses to budge.

Roosevelt's latest offer was to make him U. S. ambassador to Italy. Ambassador William Phillips is planning to retire in the spring and Roosevelt saw a chance of killing two birds with one stone—filling the post quickly and at the same time getting shed of Woodring in the cabinet. But he wouldn't bite.

"Harry," the president said ingratiatingly, "how would you and the Mrs. like to go to Rome?"

"Thanks, Mr. President," was the prompt reply. "It was nice of you to think of us, but I don't want to go to Rome."

And that was that. Roosevelt smiled, Woodring grinned back at him—and is still in the cabinet. Apparently it's going to take more than a sugar-coated hint to dislodge the secretary of war.

Bricker for President.

WITHOUT public announcement, the presidential campaign of Governor John Bricker of Ohio has been thrown into high gear again.

It was voluntarily switched off several months ago after a series of secret pow-wows with Senator Bob Taft, at which Bricker agreed to give his fellow Ohioan a clear field. Taft has been busily campaigning ever since, dashing about the country with his dynamic wife, making numerous speeches, and jousting with Roosevelt over balancing the budget.

Recently Bricker lieutenants decided that Taft's boom was not catching on. After contacting friendly leaders in a number of states, they quietly reopened their headquarters at 120 South LaSalle street, Chicago, and are again doing business at the old stand.

According to a private letter sent out to state leaders, "Governor Bricker has not sanctioned this activity, and in all probability will not approve of it." But to date he hasn't disapproved and the campaigning goes merrily on.

Bricker intimates consider him a victim of repeated bad breaks. If it hadn't been for Taft, they say, the governor would by now have been far out in front as a "favorite son" candidate.

Another bad break they list is the Cleveland relief mess. It is significant that in the publicity matter sent out by the Bricker headquarters, no mention is made of the relief controversy. He is pictured as a great vote getter and administrator, but there is not one word about relief.

Jackson's Hat.

BOB JACKSON'S first cabinet meeting as attorney general cost him a hat.

He remained behind after the others left, to discuss several legal matters with the president, and when he emerged from the office his hat was gone. There was a hat on the rack, but it wasn't Jackson's and there were no initials on the band to identify its owner.

"Well, Pat," he said to Pat McKenna, genial, veteran White House receptionist, "I've heard of losing one's shirt, but I didn't expect to lose my hat."

"Maybe," laughed McKenna, "somebody took it to throw into the ring. They're doing that a lot these days."

Anti-Lynching Vote.

VICE PRESIDENT JACK GARNER not only favors a senate vote on the long-stymied anti-lynching legislation, but he has worked out a compromise bill to get a vote.

Repeated southern filibusters have been the sole obstacle to enactment of this measure for years, and Garner has always sided with his fellow-southerners. But in this session, with his hat in the presidential ring, Cactus Jack has changed his tune.

Garner's plan is to junk the house-passed measure, which would subject local officials and counties to heavy fines, and substitute investigation by the FBI. His bill as tentatively drafted reads as follows:

"Whenever a lynching takes place in the United States and there are no arrests or prosecutions the Federal Bureau of Investigation will make a thorough and complete investigation and report to the governor of the state in which the lynching took place."

This formula is similar to the compromise suggested by the president in the 1938 fight over anti-lynching, when a six-weeks southern filibuster, led by Senator Tom Connally of Texas, finally forced the shelving of a bill passed by the house.

At a secret White House conference of congressional leaders, Garner was very emphatic.

"I mean business," he told the conference. "I'm going to see to it that the senate votes on this issue."

Roosevelt was very much amused by this declaration and kidded his running-mate. "Atta boy, Jack," he laughed. "You tell 'em. They can't shove us around."

Finnish Loan.

ONE behind-the-scenes factor weighing heavily in the senate against a loan to Finland is its failure to use money already available to it.

Shortly after the Soviet invasion, the Export-Import bank extended a $10,000,000 credit to the Finns for purchase of food supplies. So far only $500,000 of this fund has been drawn on. The Finns still have $9,500,000 available.

Also being questioned privately by a number of senators is the possibility of foodstuffs purchased here, such as wheat, being secretly exchanged abroad for guns and munitions. It is not charged that the Finns intend to do this, but reports of such a plan are being whispered about and senators are pricking up their ears.

Merry-Go-Round.

MORRIS ERNST, noted New York liberal lawyer who fought the successful CIO case against Mayor Frank Hague, has been asked to act as counsel for one of the 17 Christian Fronters charged with plotting against the government. . . . Following the arrest of the group, G-boss J. Edgar Hoover was deluged with an avalanche of venomously abusive and threatening letters—practically all of them anonymous. . . . Although CIO leaders may disagree among themselves on political strategy, they have an unwritten rule that John L. Lewis does the political talking for the organization. It is their policy always to present a united front. . . . Senator Jim Mead of New York is a staunch New Dealer, but he has served quiet notice on administration leaders that he is going to oppose the WPA cut and lead the fight for an increased appropriation.

An Unusual Letter

(A FARMER'S DIARY)

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

IN MY MAIL recently was a letter that would draw a second glance from any one who looked at it. It bore my name in flowing Spencerian script delicate, flourishing, and as exact as etching. One sensed that its author had learned his art when 'Ritin' along with Readin' and 'Rithmetic was one of the foundation pillars of education.

This fancy, keenly practiced hand is a reminder of the old-time one-room country school, sometimes made of logs and heated by an antique wood-burning tin plate stove. Others of the "box car" type had a large bowled coal stove in the center. Youngsters sitting near would roast, while those farther back shivered and shook.

Copybooks of that day were filled with muscular movement exercises, hair lines and fancy rolling ovals and hoops. My grandmother used to treasure a Spencerian lion composed entirely of tiny shaded whorls and wheels made by a practiced penman of nearly a century ago. In the days when literary societies and spelling bees were the regular thing, this ornate and colorful penmanship was exhibited upon the walls and blackboards.

A teacher of penmanship came regularly to the country school which I attended. Alas, all that lingers in my own practise of that teaching is perhaps one good curlycue upon the initial letter of my signature. Never good at it, I have yielded to the modern trend to spare oneself exertion and cut the matter of writing—and of spelling—to the bone. I have a kind of shorthand of my own. To be my secretary requires both eyesight and imagination.

The letter of which I speak is from a stranger. It has the flowing streamlined perfection that suggests the olden days, but none of the tremors one would expect for a man of 70 or older. Perhaps, like myself, he has admired the old ways and followed them in some respects, regardless of modern trends. At any rate it is a rare and unusual pleasure to come upon his letter.

BABIES ADOPTED

This is contrary to expectations as it was thought that calling up of men, evacuation, cost of living, and employment conditions in general would adversely affect the adoption of children.

Maneuvers Seen U. S. Act To Protect Caribbean Isles

22 VESSELS IN SQUADRON OFF DUTCH INDIES

Action Believed Indication of U. S. Defense If Holland Goes Into War.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—(U.P.)— American naval maneuvers off the Dutch West Indies suggested today that the navy may be preparing to defend the strategic Caribbean islands if Holland is drawn into the European war.

President Roosevelt revealed at his press conference yesterday that 22 naval vessels maneuvering in the Caribbean will operate off and out of the Dutch islands of Curacao, Aruba, Bonaire and St. Eustatius. He insisted that assembly of the Atlantic squadron in the Caribbean was only a routine training maneuver.

The navy and state department refused to comment. Diplomatic circles, however, speculated that naval maneuvers near the Dutch islands following recent Dutch mobilization on the German border might be more than coincidence.

Informed sources hinted that there may be significance in Mr. Roosevelt's decision to send the Atlantic squadron on "good neighbor" calls to the Dutch Indies at a time when Holland apparently considered itself endangered.

The maneuvers precipitated semi-official speculation that the incident might imply:

1. A warning to Germany and all other European powers that revision of the Netherland's status-quo would not be permitted by the United States to result in change of ownership of the Dutch Indies.

2. Demonstration that the United States fleet is prepared to defend the strategic Caribbean approaches to America's life-line—the Panama Canal.

3. That the lines of western hemisphere defenses run along and through islands owned by European nations as well as territory of the Americas.

4. Active Atlantic squadron preparation for any eventuality by familiarizing officers with harbars, navigation conditions, topography and populations of the tiny but important islands.

criminate in the handling of complaints, and maintain a faulty accounting system—all with the belief that if the social security board were to withhold federal funds because of this, the state agency could go to congress later for a special appropriation in proportion to the funds the state had put out.

The president said it was not seriously questioned that the board's action in withholding payment to Ohio was well founded.

But enactment of the Jenkins bill, he contended, "would in effect render nugatory in this instance the salutary provision of the social security act which accords the federal government the sole means of assuring an effective administration and disposition of funds granted by it to the states under the social security act."

Swedes Lead Raids on Russian Centers.

FINNISH NORTHEASTERN ARMY GENERAL HEADQUARTERS, ROVANIEMI — (UP) — Swedish volunteer aviators have made their appearance on northern fronts and are leading successful raiding flights against Russian centers in the Petsamo Arctic sea zone, it was understood today.

It was reported, but not conformed, that these raids had extended as far as Murmansk, Russia's important Arctic Sea base.

Intensified Russian bombing raids in northern Finland were believed here to have been connected with the arrival of the Swedish volunteers. One of the aims of the numerous raids was believed to be to bomb bases of the Swedish auxiliary force.

Gen. Ernest Linder, formerly of the Swedish army and now her No. 2 in Finland's third war of independence, arrived here yesterday to take command of the Scandinavian volunteer corps. He will prepare the Swedish-Norwegian corps, as it largely is, to go to the front in close co-operation with the Finnish northern army.

Rovaniemi was subjected to a Russian air raid yesterday. The Lake Kemi area over toward the Russian frontier has been bombed twice.

Doctors, Invalids Killed by Bombs.

HELSINKI —(INS)— Doctors, nurses and invalids were among 31 persons killed in hospital shelters during Soviet Russion air attacks on the Finnish towns of Nurmes and Hyrynsalmi, according to reports received in Helsinki today.

The raids were carried out as part of a general Russion aerial offensive that rained bombs on ten separate Finnish districts

Finnish sources claimed that ten buildings were destroyed by the Russian, who dropped 400 bombs, only to have nine of their bombers shot down.

The casualties resulted from direct hits on the shelters, it was stated.

Meanwhile, the Finnish high command claimed military successes on the eastern frontier north of Lake Ladoga, including the killing of 1,000 Russian troops.

This afternoon it appeared that operations just north of Lake Ladoga were assuming the proportions of a major battle with the Russians doing everything in their power to advance in a far-flung maneuver aimed at outflanking the Mannerheim line.

So far, it was reported, the Finns have successfully resisted the latest Russian drive.

On the Salla front to the north fighting was still progressing and it was indicated that the Russions were retreating skillfully, thereby preventing the Finns, from encircling and trapping the Soviet forces.

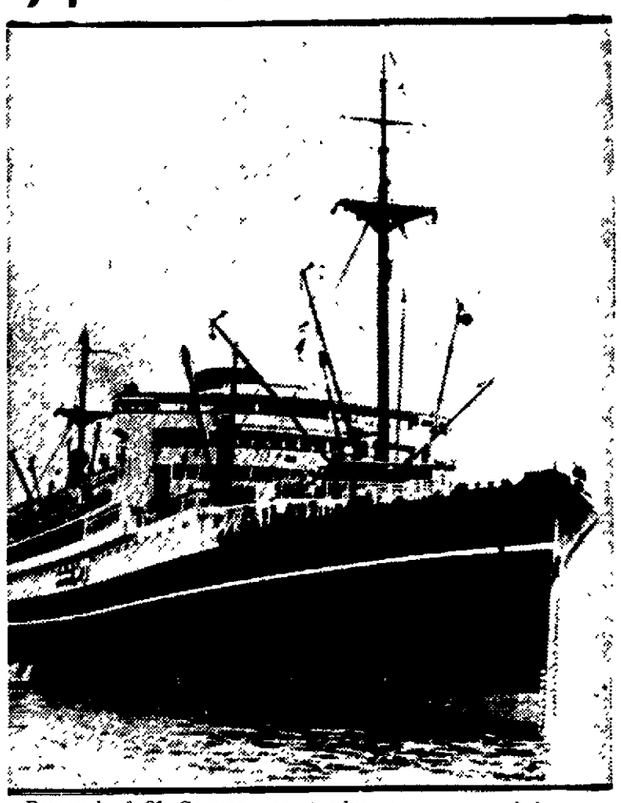
Japan Protests British Action



Removal of 21 German seamen from this Japanese liner, the Asama Maru, by an armed party from a British cruiser near Yokohama, Japan adds to strained relations between the two nations and brings about formal protests from the Japanese government. The fact that Britain had notified Japan in advance was ignored by some Japanese newspapers which demanded editorially that the government take "the strongest action." The men seized were en route from San Francisco to Germany by way of Japan after having been released by the oil company which had employed them aboard its tankers.

IF YOU'RE IN A RUT, TRY FALLING IN LOVE, FILM STAR'S ADVICE

(By International News Service)

HOLLYWOOD — If you're in a rut, try falling in love!

That is Rochelle Hudson's prescription for those who are surrounded by inhibitions, hemmed in by lack of self-confidence and otherwise thwarted in their ambition to succeed. Furthermore, the diminutive actress, whose star is in the ascendant, proved her theory by practical application.

Three years ago, Miss Hudson was in a slump in Hollywood. Today she is rapidly becoming one of the more important screen personalities. In speedy succession, she has turned in attention-arresting performances in a group of pictures and is consequently in constant demand by producers.

Her place in the sun is clearly evident when it is known that Columbia surrounded her with six satellites, all of them leading ladies, in "Convicted Woman."

Miss Hudson's "revival" was an emotional one. She had been living in a shell. She dreamt of being irresistible and then turned up so tongue-tied that she frightened people away. Then came love and marriage, to a confident, enterprising and energetic business man. The actress gradually absorbed his confidence. His habit of deciding that he was going to do a thing and then doing it gradually became her habit.

Without any fanfare, she became a distinctive personality and realized that most obstacles to success were mental.

Furthermore, Miss Hudson's newly found confidence, was reflected in her personality. She blossomed. A nervousness in her voice vanished. Her eyes are gay, her mind, manner and words flash with new, keen maturity.

"But then," she adds philosophically, "love has always been the proper cure for everything."

As proof of her new attitude, Rochelle approached the difficult "Convicted Woman" role with a confidence which would have been impossible three years ago. That confidence, apparent in her deft handling of every situation, is the keystone upon which her new career is being built.

The train left Omaha at 11:15 last night and was due to arrive at Boise, Idaho, at 7:20 a. m. tomorrow.

GROWING PAINS OF MEXICO CITY BECOME ACUTE

Federal District Houses 8 Per Cent of Population; Controversy Starts.

(By United Press)

MEXICO, D. F.—Recent rapid growth of Mexico City has become a topic of controversy.

The facts are that the Federal District's population is estimated at 1,682,930, compared with 1,229,376 in 1931. This is equivalent to about 8 per cent of the republic's entire population.

Theories and arguments about this situation are multiple. Some say that it's a great thing to have the capital's population increase 37 per cent in the decade of peace which Mexico has enjoyed since the last revolt (the easily defeated movement headed by Gen. Gonzalo Escobar, now a resident of Canada). They say that this growth is a demonstration of vigor, progress, and greatness—something for the nation to be proud of.

On the other hand, the critics say that it is a demonstration of an abnormal situation. They say that it reflects the fears of people who, due to the land distribution system, political agitation in the smaller communities, etc., migrate to the capital, where they feel that they and their investments are safer.

Mexico City is surpassed in population in the Americas only by New York, Chicago, Buenos Aires, Philadelphia, Rio de Janeiro, Detroit and Los Angeles. It is bigger than any city in Spain, the mother country. Its growth continues, and the federal department of statistics estimates that the March census will show a total of around 1,750,000 inhabitants.

According to the building census recently taken, there are 154,161 structures in the Federal District, an increase of 43,948 in 10 years—which shows that edifices have been going up at the rate of nearly 4,400 a year Few cities in the world have shown such a rapid rate of construction in this decade, which, incidentally, coincides with the worldwide depression.

The noted Mexican writer, Vito Alessio Robles, described the city's growth as "enormous," adding that "this is not an index of general prosperity, but it represents the agglomeration of people from the fields into the urban centers." He has unearthed statistics which show that in 1790 the census of Mexico City gave it 112,926 inhabitants; in 1802 the great German scientist Baron Alexander von Humboldt estimated it as 137,000; the census of 1820 placed it as 158,846.

Rise Rapid Since 1900.

The rate of growth in the 19th century was very small, so that it was rapidly surpassed in importance by younger cities of the United States, which in the 18th Century had been much smaller than the Mexican capital. In the 20th century it began to rise rapidly; in 1923 its population was 633,367. In 1930 the total was 968,443. By a decree effective in September, 1931, the boundaries were extended to their present size, and the name changed from Mexico City to "Mexico, Federal District." Population in 1931 of the new district was 1,229,576.

One item which tends to show that the big increase in population in the past years has been due to the influx into the Federal District is that in 1939 it was estimated that the average family residing there had only between four and five members, compared with an average of between five and six in 1931.

the door had been broken, and failing to gain entrance that way, the prowler then broke a window near the cash register where he could reach the money, Schnittke reported.

The trio picked up in the safe cracking was arraigned before Justice of the Peace J. H. Armstrong in Ashland yesterday afternoon John Sopko, 31, and Harry Popovich, 33, pleaded innocent and were bound over to the grand jury under $1,000 bonds

Charges against Clarence Zenner, 22, were dismissed after he promised to testify for the state He is being held as a material witness in lieu of $500 bond.

Sopko and Popovich were identified by Maxwell Hoover, Loudonville restaurant owner and his waiter Alfred Crouse, as having been in the restaurant in the village on the night of the robbery.

Charges against Zenner were dismissed because it was stated that although he is alleged to have come from Akron with the other two, he did not come into the village when their car broke down at Mt. Vernon.

Zenner testified he had taken a bus at Mt. Vernon, gone back to Akron, and later driven down in his car. It was Zenner's car, parked near the Equity which led to the apprehension of the trio.

Others who testified against the men included Patrolman Schnittke, Marshal A. E. Conrad, Sheriff L. D. Hammond and State Patrol men B. J. Szewzyk and C. W. Myers.

Insomnia Victim Spurns Role of Sleepy Professor

HOLLYWOOD—(INS)—An old stage tradition, that your true performer does not play a role for which he is not suited, cost an extra—who shall be nameless—an $11 job.

Director Ted Reed needed a middle-aged man for a small part in Paramount's "At Good Old Siwash."

"This is easy," Reed explained to the extra. "You're a college professor. It's night. You're asleep here on this bed. William Holden sneaks in and turns back all your clocks an hour You just lie there without moving. You're asleep."

"Mr. Reed, I appreciate your interest, but I cannot accept the role. It isn't suited to me."

"Not suited?"

"No, Mr. Reed. I cannot sleep. I suffer from insomnia."

British Churches Remain Without Bomb Protection

LONDON — (INS) — The camouflaging and sand-bagging of Britain's cathedrals and other historic buildings is not to be attempted by the government owing to the possibility of irreparable damage.

After discussion with the church authorities and other responsible authorities, the government has decided that these buildings must take their chance in air raids.

Camouflage, to be effective, according to the Ministry of Home Security, must be on such a scale that the texture of the stone, the result of centuries of weathering, might be lost beyond repair.

In addition the cathedrals and other famous buildings would be recognizable from the air owing to their characteristic planning.

Another danger is that treatment by camouflage might give the enemy the impression that the building was being used for a military purpose

The ministry suggested, however, that structural precautions for protection against air attack may be advisable but this should not extend to external disfigurement.

She hasn't made a picture for a long time—in fact, her last picture was "Dramatic School," which the Ritz is showing today and tomorrow. Paulette Goddard is also featured in it. Joel McCrea in "Espionage Agent" is the second attraction.

Stomach Pains Relieved For Well Known Mansfield Lady

Had To Be Careful What She Ate Or Would Have Gas, Cramps, Acid Risings, and Other Troubles Resulting From Constipation.

"I had been forced to watch carefully what I ate, otherwise, I was likely to suffer later, because I was constipated daily and this kept my stomach upset," said Mrs. Fred Collins of 396 Oak St Rd., whose husband is a welder by trade, to the Vendol Man in Central Drug Store when telling of the wonderful change Vendol has made in her feelings

"I'm sure my troubles all came from being constipated and made my meals disagree. Food seemed to lay in my stomach and turn sour, form gas that caused a full bloated feeling, and I'd rift a hot, sour liquid that burned right up to my throat, and seemed like I had a lump in my chest.

"When I started taking Vendol and the little Vendol laxative tablets, I didn't think it possible for a medicine to improve my feelings as much as it has done.

"First it relieved my constipation in the finest, most satisfying manner, then it seemed no matter what I ate it never upset my stomach nor formed gas, giving that burning sensation So I haven't had any of these distressing troubles lately

MRS. FRED COLLINS

"Another benefit I noted after getting relief from constipation, and that was my relaxed nerves so that I now enjoy peaceful, restful sleep every night, and that alone was worth the price of Vendol

"After all Vendol did for me, is there any wonder I'm happy over it all and want to let others who suffer know about this grand medicine?

GIRL AT THE FRONT + + + + +

By ROB EDEN

CHAPTER VII.

Maria's place, it turned out, was only a short walk on the Rue du Colisee, and in a few minutes they were mounting the stairs to the third floor by a dimly lighted stairway. As in every place in Paris, even the inside lights had been replaced with tiny blue globes. Any stray beam that might escape outside was immediately lost in the blackness. Only within homes and apartments were bright lights permitted, and then only if the windows were properly curtained and painted. Paris was taking no chances on night raids—leaving no gleam of light to indicate a target on which to unload bombs to an enemy circling high above.

Claire looked curiously about the flat and found it unusually attractive. There was a small entrance hall with a parquet table beneath a large mirror. It was on this table that they all placed their gas masks. Claire was a bit self-conscious yet about hers, but the others accepted them as a matter of course and placed them where they could be snatched up on a moment's notice if an alarm sounded.

There was a large, comfortable salon, one corner of which near the large front window Maria had converted into a little studio. A screen, heavy with Chinese brocade, cut it off into a little alcove. It was there she kept her easel and her drawing and painting materials.

"The north light is best," Maria explained as she showed the American girl about the place. In addition to the salon, there were two small bedrooms, with a bath between, and at the rear a tiny kitchen.

"It's very comfortable," Claire approved.

"Perhaps you'd like to move in here with me," Maria suggested. "You see, I've just recently lost my tenant. An American like yourself. She is a musician and had been studying here for a year. She left just a week ago.

"I haven't any too much money," Maria went on, "and I need some one to share expenses. I'm sure you could live much more cheaply here than at a hotel. Besides, I don't know just what the war will do to my business. People are not much interested in fashions, I'm afraid, when men are killing one another by the thousands almost within hearing distance of Paris."

"Sounds like a swell chance, Claire," Danny spoke up, "if you intend to stay on in Paris for awhile. The place is close to everything — near the subway, within walking distance of many places. You couldn't do better. Besides, I'd feel a lot more satisfied if I knew you were with some one I know, instead of by yourself. Paris can be a pretty dangerous place for a girl by herself, you know, especially in times like these."

The offer seemed attractive to Claire, and she fell in love with the bedroom that Maria said would be hers if she should decide to come in with her. It was fitted up like a luxurious boudoir, with an embroidered silk spread that the girl knew must be worth thousands of francs.

"What a beautiful cover!" she exclaimed.

"One of the few things I was able to bring with me when I left Russia," Maria explained. "That is one of my assets, or was until the war came along and knocked down the price of everything. I probably couldn't sell it for enough to pay a month's rent now if I had to part with it. How does my suggestion appeal to you?"

"I -I'll have to think it over," Claire said, hesitantly. She suddenly remembered what the man who called himself "Z. Y." had said. That some of the people she might meet tonight would be friends, some enemies. It was just as well to be cautious and not rush into a situation that might prove difficult to get out of later.

"Who is that playing?" she asked. While she had been talking with Maria and Danny, she was conscious of music, but for the first time she realized it was in the apartment.

"Julie Roland, Maria answered. "Doesn't she play beautifully?"

Claire walked toward the piano and stood leaning against it as Mrs. Roland played softly, and hummed.

"My husband loves it," Julie smiled up at her.

"It's awfully silly, but I just can't seem to remember the title," Claire said. "It sounds quite familiar."

"It is rather characteristic of Schubert," Julia answered, "But it is not very well known. It's from one of his less frequently played sonatas."

Her hands, beautiful and delicate, rested idly on the piano keys as she finished playing.

"How about something Polish?" Captain Martin suggested. "Chopin's Polonaise, for instance?"

Claire thought she saw a quick glance flash between Julie and her husband, but a moment later the American woman plunged into the composition. Just as she finished, there was a knock at the door and Maria went to answer it, saying, "Perhaps it's Noel, come at last."

She heard voices, Maria's raised in greeting, and the answering voice of a man. It had a familiar ring, a peculiar vibrancy and she instantly recognized it.

It was the voice of the man who had shared her taxi earlier that evening—the man known to her only as "Z. Y."

Shouts of "Hello, Noel! Welcome to our city!" greeted the new arrival, and Claire looked eagerly toward the doorway as she followed Maria into the room.

"Noel—Noel who?" she demanded in a low tone of Danny Brooks. He shook his head.

"I don't know for sure, but I think it's Noel Yorke—he's a painter. Very wealthy American who's lived over here for years—if he's the same one. Rene has mentioned him to me several times but I've never met him, although I've seen some of his paintings. Not bad, either. Much better than you'd expect from a sort of professional playboy, as I gather Noel Yorke is."

Claire's eyes eagerly swept the figure of the man who approached the group about the piano with a frank, friendly smile lighting up his face. He was of medium height, his features seemed to fall into curves rather than sharp angles, and his dark hair was brushed sleekly back from his forehead.

He seemed perfectly at home in the flat, and greeted his friends with a quick word or two and a slight widening of his smile. As he approached Claire, his features settled into a graver mould and he bowed stiffly as Maria introduced him.

"Miss Dutton," she said, "may I present a countryman of yours—a very charming countryman, I should have said—Mr. Noel Yorke. Mr. Yorke, Miss Dutton."

Claire nodded pleasantly and waited for the man to speak, but after a murmured acknowledgement of the introduction he turned to Brooks and shook hands with him when Maria presented him.

"I've read a lot of your dispatches, Brooks," he said. "I've been getting several American newspapers for years, until recently. The transatlantic mails are not what they used to be now, with things as they are."

Claire examined him closely, now that she was certain of who he was. There wasn't the slightest doubt in her mind that he was the "Z. Y." of the taxicab, but he gave not the slightest hint that he ever had seen or heard of her before as he moved easily about the circle.

"What's new about the war?" Yorke asked, turning back again to Brooks. "You know we private citizens are terribly uninformed, with censorship so rigid in Paris. I looked over all the papers this evening but got very little from them."

"You know just about as much as I do about it, sir," Brooks answered. "I wasn't old enough to get it on the first World war, and it doesn't look as if I'll get much chance to become famous as a war correspondent in this one. Most of us are kept right here in Paris—with just an occasional visit to the front where we're very carefully kept from seeing anything. Even if we did discover a big piece of news, it probably wouldn't do us any good. One of the censors would head us off."

"How about you, Rene?" Yorke went on. "You're on officer connected with the War Ministry. What do you hear? Anything exciting?"

Claire could sense a tenseness that suddenly developed in the room. She glanced quickly at Julie Roland. Her hands were straying idly over the piano keys, making soft, melodic chords. Her eyes on her hands, but Claire knew she heard every word that was said. George Roland, seated across the room, was intent on lighting a cigar, but Claire was certain that he too had not missed a word since Yorke entered.

The aviation officer shrugged his shoulders.

"You know as much as I, Noel," he said. "Even if I really knew anything—which I don't—I couldn't tell you, if it had any particular significance. You can't be too careful these days, you know. There are spies everywhere. We all are forbidden to even discuss the war."

"Any special assignments?" Yorke persisted.

"I had one today, but it didn't come off," Rene answered. "I was to have flown a man to Le Havre—I waited most of the day at St. Cyr, but he never did show up."

"What happened to him?" Yorke asked quickly.

"That I don't know."

"Strange, isn't it?" Maria said.

"Why, strange?" Roland put in. "I don't see anything much in that. Rene was ordered to fly a man down to Le Havre, but the man just didn't show up Perhaps he met a young lady somewhere and forgot all about his date with you, Rene." He looked with mock severity at his wife. "Julie, you weren't out flirting today, were you, while I was busy in the shop?"

Julie Roland's cheeks suddenly were suffused with red, and they all joined in the laugh at her expense.

"Poor Julie," Maria said, patting her shoulder. "She's so easily teased, and George never misses an opportunity."

"Perhaps we can get something on the radio," Danny Brooks suggested. "Do you mind, Maria, if I turn it on?"

"Of course not. There might be a new communique."

Danny switched on the radio and a moment later a voice, shouting in German, came roaring out fo the loud speaker. Danny hastily toned it down as they all listened intently.

The silence was broken by a sudden sharp laugh, and all eyes turned toward George Roland.

"That's a Frenchman talking German," he said, "or I'm a Chinaman. You can spot them every time."

"You're probably right," Noel Yorke agreed. "That's about all you hear on the air these days—Frenchmen talking German, aiming broadcasts at the German people, and Germans speaking French, intended to weaken our morale."

Danny turned the radio off.

"I've heard more talk and less news in this war than any I ever had any part in before," the correspondent said. "Now when I was in Spain, and before that in Ethiopia . . ."

They were mere preliminaries to this one," Captain Martin put in. "We learned then the necessity of masking all movements behind a verbal smoke screen."
